EDITOR'S NOTE

It's time to think about your Abode

I was a touch worried that the blistering cold that's lingered in the Wausau area would hang around for our two-part Abode series. Who wants to think about spring cleaning when it's freezing out?

That's right, I did say two parts. In setting our schedule this year, we decided that two issues was enough to cover all the topics around the home and hearth. As you'll recall, it could be anything from spring cleaning to finances to gardening. There's a wide range of topics we've covered here and they've always been fun for me to write. Especially after a grueling election season.

This week's main story is really something - a cool new program aimed at helping to reduce poverty. It looks at not just the financial side of the equation but everything from relationships to emotional and spiritual wellness.

Not everyone's abode is the same, and I thought highlighting this new program would be the perfect start to our abode series. And as far as I can tell, you're reading about it here first. Enjoy.
